Application to the Approved Organisation

The Rally Vehicle must be Inspected at least annually by a Scrutineer to ensure that the vehicle continues to be eligible.

The Inspection cannot be greater than 42 days old to establish the Conditional Registration.

Acceptance

If the application meets all the requirements then the Responsible Person must complete the Rally Vehicle Declaration and provide this to the Applicant for submission to Transport for NSW.

Application to Transport for NSW

The following must be presented to Richmond Service NSW Centre to establish the Conditional Registration:

- Rally Vehicle Declaration completed by the Responsible Person not greater than 42 days old.
- Licensed Certifier Report (if required in the Dedicated Rally Vehicle Technical Manual).
- Vehicle Import Approval (if the vehicle is imported).

The vehicle acquirer must make a new application to the Approved Organisation and Transport for NSW as detailed above.

Converting to full registration

Rally Vehicles cannot be fully registered without first being restored to normal NSW vehicle standards, and evidenced as such by a Compliance Certificate issued by a Licensed Certifier.

Any compliance plate issued by the vehicle's manufacturer must be affixed to the vehicle and in its proper position to be eligible for full registration.

Vehicles imported as a Rally Vehicle will not be considered for full registration. However, vehicles imported under the commonwealth government's Personal Imports Scheme, Low Volume Scheme or Registered Automotive Workshop Scheme may be considered for full registration after restoration and certification as detailed above.

Any import plate or label issued under the above import schemes must be affixed to the vehicle to be eligible for full registration.

Sanctions and removal from the RVS

If it is determined that an Applicant/registered operator/driver has breached the Conditions of Operation, the Approved Organisation may determine that the Rally Vehicle and/or Applicant is no longer eligible under the RVS.

In these instances the Responsible Person may request that Transport for NSW suspend and/or cancel the Conditional Registration. Detailed information supporting the request must also be provided.

Transport for NSW may suspend and/or cancel the Conditional Registration of a Rally Vehicle if it is determined that an Applicant/registered operator/driver has breached the Conditions of Operation, or if otherwise required under road transport law.

If Transport for NSW determines that an Approved Organisation, Eligibility Committee member, Industry Committee member, Industry Representative, Responsible Person, Scrutineer, or other Approved Organisation official or management staff member has breached the requirements of the RVS, then Transport for NSW may disqualify that Approved Organisation or person from participating in the RVS.
