

Parkes Special Activation Precinct

Reopening of Brolgan Road

October 2023

Special Activation Precincts are being delivered by the NSW Government, with the Parkes Special Activation Precinct to be the new epicentre of the nation's freight network.

Major construction is being finalised for the Parkes precinct Stage 1 enabling works. This work includes upgrading 7.3 kilometres of Brolgan Road, constructing two bridges over railway lines and upgrades to gas, water, electricity, sewer and communication networks.

Reopening of Brolgan Road to through traffic

Brolgan Road will reopen to through traffic on Friday 13 October 2023.

Brolgan Road was closed to through traffic to enable important upgrades along Brolgan Road and the construction of the rail overpass bridge to the west near Pacific National's freight terminal to improve safety and access. The western bridge is now complete, along with works required to facilitate additional access routes into the precinct, which extended the temporary closure of the road.

We would like to thank the community for their patience and understanding as we've completed this important work.

While the majority of the Brolgan Road upgrades are now complete, there is still some work remaining including construction of the eastern bridge. There will be ongoing temporary traffic changes including 40km/h speed limits and stop/slow signs will remain in place along some sections of the road. Please allow more travel time, keep to posted speed limits and follow the directions of traffic controllers and road signs.
