Under the privacy legislation you have a right to request alteration of personal and/or health information concerning you that is held by the NSW Education Standards Authority (NESA), to ensure it is accurate and, having regard to the purpose for which it was collected, is relevant, up to date, complete and not misleading.

If NESA is not prepared to amend the information, you may request that it attach to the information a statement of the amendment sought.

NESA may refuse to process your application in part, or in whole, if there is an exemption under the legislation that restricts the alteration sought.

You have the right to request an internal review by NESA of a decision in relation to your application for alteration. A request for internal review can be sent to the address below.

Proof of identity

When seeking alteration of your, your child’s or another person’s personal or health information on their behalf, you will be required to provide proof of identity. This requirement will be met by providing a copy of one of the following documents:

- Australian driver photo licence showing current address, or
- Current Australian passport, and current address details, or
- Other proof of name, signature, relationship to the person on whose behalf you are acting (such as Medicare card or birth certificate) and current address details.
